It's a little more two weeks until from the March 3 and 4 official opening festivities for the Margaret Hunt Hill Bridge. The weekend is going to be jam-packed with activities open to the public. What is going to help pay for all the street fair, fireworks, local entertainment and fun will be monies raised from the Margaret Hunt Hill Bridge Celebration Party on Friday, March 2, fundraising gala.

In addition to having the bridge as a setting and Todd Ficus in charge of the mega-hoopla is the entertainment – Lyle Lovett! Talk about beyond perfect timing – Long, tall Texan Lyle performing on Texas Independence Day. Ah, but there's more. Seems that Lyle's newest studio album, "Release Me," is being released on Tuesday, February 28.

Tickets for the Friday celebration of Dallas' newest landmark are $200.

You're wondering about the weather situation. Negotiations are underway with Mother Nature, but organizers promise that a back-up plan is in place. For newcomers, when there is a lock-down, back-up plan, the weather usually turns out perfect. Will keep you posted as the we get closer to the big weekend.
